

Inspired Design

As founder and president of Master Design Cabinetry, Amos Stoltzfus leads a team of luxury cabinetry designers devoted to creating one-of-a-kind cabinets that leave a lasting impression.

Amos Stoltzfus was raised on a working farm in Chester County, inheriting his work ethic from his father. Although he appreciated the simple beauty of the farming life, he discovered his true passion in the trades—specifically, fine custom cabinetry. He had a particular talent for custom cabinetry design for luxury living.

“I loved solving problems for people,” Amos recalls. “I was 20 years old when I started, and I had a way of asking customers the right questions and discovering what they wanted. So many of my clients would express sheer joy over the cabinetry I had the honor to create for them.”

In 2009, Amos founded Master Design Cabinetry, his own custom-cabinetry enterprise based in East Earl, east of Lancaster. In the 15 years since, the company has earned a reputation for designing and manufacturing exceptionally well-crafted cabinets tailored to homeowners’ distinct lifestyles and living spaces. Master Design uses only the highest-quality materials—namely, North American plywood, with solid-wood doors and drawer fronts—to build each bespoke creation with an eye toward refinement and longevity.

“We’ve had continuous growth since our first summer,” Amos says. “We still have some clients from our first year returning to us with new projects.”

Master Design lives by the mantra, “If you can dream it, we can build it.” The company empowers homeowners to drive the process of turning their dreams into reality; clients are intimately involved in every decision, from the size and design of the cabinets, to the materials used, to the finish and accessories. In-depth consultations provide opportunities for further customization with unique features and storage solutions designed to enhance a homeowner’s lifestyle.

While Master Design builds cabinets for installation in homes across the United States, the company focuses primarily on the Mid-Atlantic—eastern Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland, as well as the District of Columbia.

Amos may be the firm’s president and founder, but he credits Master Design’s success to the craftsmanship and dedication of his team, which he describes as “an incredible group of people who care deeply about the product they create and the unbelievable customer service they provide.” The team includes Master Design’s 16 employees, as well as the independent shop builders who manufacture the cabinets and the team of installers who bring the cabinet designs to life.

Amos founded Master Design on the unshakeable foundation of integrity, positive communication, and adherence to the Golden Rule (“Do unto others as you would have them do unto you”). The company’s culture also emphasizes the importance of family, stewardship, and teamwork, among other guiding principles. The team reviews its core values weekly and regularly discusses them in-depth, with team members offering examples of how they impact or influence their work.

Looking to the months and years ahead, Amos foresees continued growth for Master Design, including the addition of a destination showroom for homeowners from up and down the East Coast, and possibly even farther away.

“The new showroom will be on trend, full of inspiration, and have a lot of wow factors,” he says. “It’s going to be a compelling place where people can see the talent of our team and the uniqueness of what they create.” ■
